The Irish Journal of Adult and Community Education: The Adult Learner 2027

In order to protect the legal rights and interests of both The Irish Journal of Adult and Community Education: The Adult Learner and its authors, and in addition to clarify the copyright property and ownership of The Adult Learner and its authors, the following statement regarding manuscript copyright must be signed by each author:

1. The authors declare that they have not submitted the article for publication anywhere else and that the submitted article has not been published previously.
2. For any manuscript submitted to The Adult Learner, the author(s) should declare that their submitted article is their own original work, it does not infringe any rights or disclose any secrets, and that no disputes of intellectual property shall arise in relation to the ranking of author names, and it does not contain or include material taken from other copyrighted sources. Wherever such materials have been included, they must be clearly identified by quotation marks and/or proper citation of such sources.
3. After publication in The Adult Learner, authors retain the copyright of articles. Author(s) temporarily transfer the copyright to The Adult Learner to publish the article, use it for indexing, and storing on the AONTAS website for public use.
4. All published works are licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License. It means that authors reserve all proprietary rights such as patent rights and the right to copy and redistribute the material of published works in any medium or format. Also, they have the right to use all or part of the article in their future works (e.g., lectures, press releases, and reviews of textbooks), remix, transform, and build upon the material for any purpose, even commercially.

Under the Creative Commons end user license, the readers can reuse portions or extracts from the published article in their works by including attribution to the original work and its author, and citing The Adult Learner.

Corresponding Author, Co-Authorship

A corresponding author is the person who will handle all correspondence about the article, is responsible for ensuring that all authors' contact details are correct, and agrees on the order that their names will appear in the article.

Only individuals who significantly contributed to the conception, design, implementation, or interpretation of the reported study should be given the privilege of authorship. When additional people contributed to the research study in a meaningful way, they should be acknowledged or identified as contributors. The final version of the work has been seen by all co-authors, who have given their approval and consent to its submission for publication.

If the article was jointly prepared by more than one author, any author submitting the article warrants that he/she has been authorized by all co-authors to be agreed on this copyright and license notice (agreement) on their behalf and agrees to inform his/her co-authors of the terms of this policy. In the case that there are one or more co-authors, all authors must sign the copyright statement.

The Adult Learner will not be held liable for anything that may arise due to the author(s) internal dispute. The Adult Learner will only communicate with the corresponding author.

Conflict of Interest Statement

The Adult Learner defines a conflict of interest as “anything that interferes with or could reasonably be perceived as interfering with, the full and objective presentation, commissioning, peer review, editorial decision-making, or publication of research or non-research articles [...]. A conflict of interest exists if a person or institution has a relationship, personal or otherwise, which has the potential to compromise or in any way interfere with professional objectivity or judgment in issues related to the relationship.”
